Bringing innovations in health and learning to the global community

National Finalist 50-50-90-90 Study

Selected as one of 12 finalist nationwide in the 50-50-90-90 study of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. The study was conducted by NASSP staff in collaboration with researchers from the Education Alliance at Brown University. A national call for high schools serving at least 50% low income and minority students and graduating and sending to college at least 90% of their students yielded a large number of nominations.

Stuart High School as one of 30 model high schools in the country to be showcased nationally in the Bringing Best Practices to Scale project sponsored by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, the Council of Chief State School Officers, and the International Center for Leadership in Education. The project is designed to bring effective education practices to scale by gathering and sharing information from and about high schools that have been most successful at providing all students with a rigorous and relevant education.

Your school has been identified as a potential pilot school for our study which focuses on the combination of course taking, curriculum and instruction that can prepare all students for postsecondary education. You have been selected on the basis of your student's performance on state/district assessments, graduation rates, demographics and mission. Already your school has shown progress in moving students along this academic pipeline; while other schools still struggle.

IBNA Inspiration Awards 2004

Education is by its nature a collaborative endeavor, and we are often inspired by what we learn from other educators. This seems particularly true in the IB world, with its tradition of sharing, and through the enormous generosity that IB practitioners have shown each other over the years. Often these acts are unseen and unsung, but they animate the education profession and represent the essence of the IB spirit. For these reasons, these stories need to be told.
